This article will teach you how to use Photoshop to edit your photographs. We'll start with the basics, then cover the various tools, and then dive deeper into the features and tricks. If you're a photographer and want to learn more about how to use

Photoshop, you can check out our most popular Photoshop tutorial: Photoshop CS 5 for Dummies. But before we start, be aware that Photoshop is not your only option for image editing. There are many other software programs that offer similar capabilities. That said, Photoshop's ubiquitous

---

Photoshop Can Do
Photoshop can do anything that any other raster image editing software can do. It's a graphics tool with a raster format. In addition to what you might expect, it can: Edit your images with layers and masks, add text and images, and even animate. Add almost any type of photo overlay—brands, logos, textures, stylizations, text, and so on. The layer system allows you to easily create and erase an image on top of another image. Edit any type of image, from photos to scanned images to bitmap and vector graphics. Adjust the brightness, contrast, saturation, and hue. Tilt-shift, blur, and warp lenses. Select, copy, move, resize, and crop an image. Invert, hue-correct, and sharpen an image. Paint and brush with a wide variety of tools. Hang graphics, change colors, and add anti-aliasing. In short, Photoshop enables you to create and modify your images in a number of different ways. Image-Editor Mode Photoshop makes editing photographs easy to understand. It divides images into a few layers, which means you can build up and then tear down portions of an image. Each layer has a specific task. For example, Photoshop has a Background layer, which covers the entire image, and then there are three layer masks for isolating parts of the image: Layer: Any area of the image which is not covered by a layer mask. Masks are hidden when they're not in use, then apply effects, remove red eye, resize, rotate, change color, crop, use filters, and more. I used to use Photoshop CS when I was younger. It was the standard tool for every graphic artist. A couple of years ago, I bought a new computer with Windows 8.1 and Photoshop CC. After using it, I decided to try

---

---

---

---

Elements and after an hour I was really impressed. I had the feeling I was working with a new version of Photoshop, but at the same time, I was using the tool I have known from version 9 to 12. The best part of using Photoshop Elements is that it is free. You can download it, install it and use it without having to pay for anything. In this tutorial, we are going to show you how to edit your photos using Photoshop Elements 12. At first, you may get confused about some tutorials because we will show you how to use Photoshop Elements rather than Photoshop CC. To make sure you fully understand the steps, we are going to change the tutorial to the standard Photoshop version. You can follow the steps in the original tutorial to get some great tips for using Photoshop Elements. After editing your images in Photoshop Elements, you can export them as PNG or

---

---

---

JPG format, and then save them for any use. You can use them in your social media accounts, in your website or even for mobile apps. The best part about using Photoshop Elements is that if you want to become a graphic designer, you can do it without paying money and without any additional software.

---

Keep reading this tutorial and after this, you will be able to edit your photos

with Photoshop Elements

Q: How to verify identity in a Java application? We have a proprietary application that runs on a network. The application receives messages from several other applications on the same network and responds to them. The response to the messages from other applications are usually sent back to specific network addresses. The responses are then sent to an email address that has been set up so that when these responses arrive the users are notified. For a while we were receiving occasional emails from end users complaining that they did not know who had initiated the response. We could see from the logs and source code that the responses were actually being sent from our software. I am now adding a layer of authorization to this system and plan to implement checking the identity of the sending application, thereby ensuring that our software is not being misused. Should I be doing this by sending a verification token to the application with each response and verifying this when the message is received by the application? If not, what else should I be doing?

---

---

A: When I heard about the different authentication layers, I was like... "i wish one of those was in place by the NSA during the mid 90's.." So, I think you should try that. I'll look for a link, but I know of some articles saying that a certain portion of messages sent between computers require a hidden portion of the data. A lot of the time, a

---

MAC address, a signature, and such are used. I'm just saying, it might not be to protect you, but rather to send the messages away from other users. Either way, you can be fairly certain that you can get some information on the transmitting system and match against that system to verify its

Delicious Treats - Week
2 WOW! I don't know how you're still with me
after the last of my photos. I am still making tons of goodies, thank goodness, but I am going to slow down a bit. I am on to the 23rd of 31
delicious treats. Here's what I've been baking up
this week: *Pretzels

Q: PHP & MySQL with Ajax I currently have a database with a list of tags. The tags are displayed nicely in a list. I'd like this list to be updated when the user presses a button. I have the following PHP script:

$query = "SELECT *
FROM TAGS"; $result =
mysqli_query($con,
$query); while ($row =

---

```
mysqli_fetch_array($result)) { $tags[] = $row['tags']; }
mysqli_close($con);

I also have an array of my database tags which is called `$_POST['tags']` I've set up a listener in JavaScript which looks like this:

$(".do_divide").
on("click", function() { $.ajax({ type: "POST",
url: "Script.php", data:
```

---

```
"tags=" +
$("#tags").val(),
success: function(html) {
  $("#divtags").html(html)
; } });

This works nicely, it gets the tags from the database, puts them into an array, then calls to the PHP script and puts them back into the tags div. The PHP script only shows the tags in the tags div. I'd like for it to update my list. A: First, you should modify your tag table, add a rowcount column, and have a php script update the rowcount when you insert data (I'll leave that up to you to figure out). It should be easy to update the table. Your script should change to this: `$query = "SELECT , COUNT() as`

---

---

```
rowcount FROM TAGS"; $result =
mysqli_query($con, $query); $row = mysqli_f
etch_array($result);
while($row){ $tags[] =
$row['tags']; }
mysqli_close($con); And in your.js you should have:
$(".do_divide").on("
